

JAP WOMEN HERE IN "AROUND THE WORLD" PARTY

Fifty-seven Tourists Sent Out by "Biggest Paper" in Kingdom of Mikado.

FROM HOME 90 DAYS.

Fair Members of Delegation
Are Picturesque in Their Native Dress.

Around the world in ninety days is the trip a party of fifty-seven Japanese which passed through New York to-day. It is making, through the generosity of the Asahi Shimbun. According to Mr. K. Sugimura, its Osaka correspondent, this is the "biggest Japan newspaper-circulation, 400,000.

There are fifty-seven varieties of Jap in the party, and its personnel takes in the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, to say nothing of merchants, brokers, apothecaries, brewers, agricultural implement manufacturers, lawyers, politicians and farmers from all parts of Nippon. They arrived on the Fall River line steamer Providence from Boston, and left at once for Washington.

"It is the largest party of any nationality to make a trip around the world, and there are three beautiful ladies in it," said Mr. Fukutomi, the New York correspondent of the Asahi Shimbun. The three little women who, in contrast to the example of the men, scorned to adopt European dress, were certainly pleasing to behold, one of them, Mrs. Nichi Omura, the wife of an editor of Yokohama, being garbed in a purple kimono with a big yellow obi.

Photographer Causes Tears.
It was Mrs. Omura who timidly burst into tears when a photographer snapped her, she having had an unpleasant experience with a reporter in Chicago, who insisted on interviewing her on the chances of a Japanese-American war.

"Must not mind," said the polite Mr. Fukutomi to the conscience-stricken photographer. "She will recover from the tears soon. It is all right!"

It was only through the courtesy of Mr. Fukutomi that the New York newspaper men were enabled to talk with any of the members of the party. They are being handled, and the world is used advisedly, by a tourist agency, whose representative managed them much in the manner employed by a horse stevedore.

He has instituted a series of whistle signals by which they go to meals, leave ship, board ship, go to bed and so on, and it was respectfully suggested to him that he introduce the look-out among them.

Return Here Later.
The party was hustled into automobiles, which took them to the Pennsylvania station. At 10 P. M. Saturday they will be received by President Roosevelt. After the reception they will return to New York, and be entertained at a banquet by the local Nippon Club. On April 23 they sail on the Cedric for London.

They left Yokohama March 18, stopping ten hours in Honolulu and arriving in San Francisco April 3. On their transcontinental trip they visited Salt Lake City, Chicago, where they spent three days, Niagara Falls and New Boston. From Boston they visited London, Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg.

According to Mr. Sugimura they will have travelled 20,750 miles. He is a very polite and impressive young man, much taller than most Japanese, wearing the inevitable spectacles and speaks English excellently.

"Just for Education."
"We will promise," he continued smiling. "Each person will cost the paper $1,000 or 2,500 yen. It is just for education. Japanese are very fond of education, and the paper wished for as many as could to learn about the big cities of the world."

"W will promise," he continued, smiling a wide Japanese smile, "not to look at your fortifications. The talk of war between this country and my country is foolish. So far as Japan is concerned, we will not go to war. We have had enough too much—and the people are sick to hear the word. I will tell President Roosevelt that when I see him." This last proudly.

Another correspondent in the party is Mr. Tsuchiya, who is connected with the Tokyo edition of the Asahi, but he doesn't speak English as fluently as his confrere.

The ladies are Mrs. Y. Horii of Osaka, Mr. Horii, a wealthy jeweller, also being in the party. Mr. K. Omura, whose husband, a member of the Osaka Municipal Assembly, accompanies her, and Mrs. Omura. Many of the party speak English well and Mr. Sugimura said the study of the language was a compulsory branch of education in Japan.

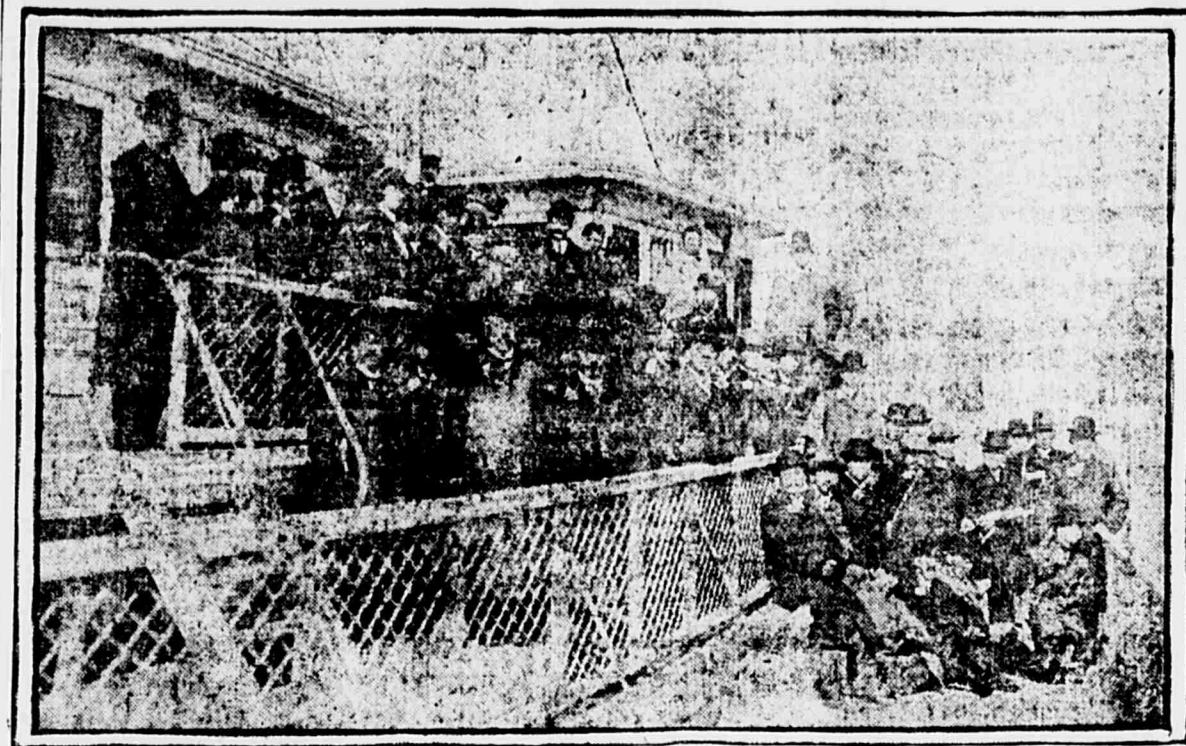

Suppose you had an Automobile and, for one reason or another, you decided to go abroad. Buy a country estate, some diamonds, &c., and ready money was scarce—wouldn't you be willing to sell your Automobile?

AT A GREAT SACRIFICE!

Many persons are so situated and you'll find their Automobiles advertised "for sale" from day to day.

WORLD-TOURING JAPANESE.

POLICEMAN FEARED HIS AIM WAS GOOD

Burglar Dropped at Shot, but Not as Dead as Evidence Indicated.

Charles Thompson, a watchman, passing the delicatessen shop of Charles Lutz at No. 33 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth street, at the darkest hour before dawn to-day, noticed two men stagger from the doorway. One of the pair carried under his arm a thirty-pound Swiss cheese; his companion was wound with sausage links and had a peculiar aroma about him.

"Where are you going with that cheese?" asked the watchman curiously.

"I'm taking it to a dentist," said the young man who bore it. "To have its cavities filled."

Thereat he thrust his nose and ran. Also ran his companion, tangled in sausage and liverwurst. Thompson blew his whistle and awoke Policeman Doyle, who was solemnly strolling his beat. Thompson pointed to the two fugitives, and Doyle shouted out to them to halt. They did not. They ran faster.

Got Away With His Cheese.
"I'll shoot," Doyle yelled. He did shoot, and the one draped in sausage fell. The other one with the Swiss cheese ran on and escaped.

As Doyle ran up to the one who fell, he (the one who fell) gasped, "I'm shot. I'm dead," rolled over and was still.

"Sure, I killed him," said Doyle to Thompson, "and I shot at the spine of that cheese."

"If you'd pointed the gun at him," said Thompson, "you'd have hit the cheese. But maybe he isn't all dead. Ring for a doctor's wagon."

"I guess he's dead all right," said Doyle, raising his hand to his nose, "but I never knew 'em to—"

He gripped his nose hard and ran to the nearest signal box.

Twenty minutes later young Surgeon Reginald Bolivar arrived with an ambulance from Harlem Hospital. A crowd had formed a wide circle about the apparently deceased. He seemed very stiff. As Dr. Bolivar broke through the circle he stopped. He turned to Doyle, who was pale and shaking.

Not So Very Dead.
"He's been dead a long while, hey?" asked the surgeon.

"He has not," snapped Doyle. "I killed him myself only thirty minutes back. He's fresh dead."

"Fresh dead," cried the surgeon, angrily. "He's been dead at least two days."

The circle about the man was gradually widening until there was almost an empty piazza about the still figure on the pavement. Surgeon Bolivar was about to return to his ambulance when an inquisitive setter dog broke through the circle, trotted over to the figure on the street, sniffed the untended face, and snatched a string of sausages. There was a distinct movement in the limbs of the supposed corpse. Doyle saw it and joy leaped in his face.

"He's alive," he cried. "He's alive," shouted the crowd, and the surgeon went over to him. The man stirred again.

"He is alive," murmured Dr. Bolivar. "But I'm blanked if the evidence isn't against it," and he gripped his nose again.

Two supposed corpses proved to be very alive when an ammonia bottle was held to his nose. He started from the pavement as if in contact with a live wire. Then, admitting his vitality, he protested that he was riddled with bullets, so Dr. Bolivar took him to the hospital. There it was found he hadn't a scratch, but there were seven pounds of hamburger cheese in various pockets. He was locked up as a burglar.

"THEY ALL LOOK ALIKE TO MARY." This is the title of the next song to be given with the New York Sunday World. Words and music complete. Come song hit of "Follies of 1907," which enjoyed a good run at the New York Theatre last year and is now on a return engagement. This is a great comic song. Words and music by Billy Kent; by arrangement with Maurice Shapiro.
